Our young American wakes up in the morning, throws back the covers, and gets out of bed. He puts on his slippers and goes into the bathroom, where he washes with soap and water. Returning to his bed room, he takes off his pajamas, and starts to dress for school. He looks out his window and sees that the weather is cold and rainy, so he picks out clothing that will keep him warm. Downstairs in the kitchen, he eats a bowl of cereal and drinks a glass of milk. He runs upstairs again to brush his teeth. Then he puts on his jacket and cap, picks his books and papers, and heads out the door to the bus stop.

a warm bed	a piece of furniture on or in which to lie and sleep built from a design going back to the ancient Middle East and modified in northern Europe before being exported to America a sheet	made of cotton, first grown and domesticated in India a blanket	made of wool from sheep first tamed and herded in the Middle East, probably in what is now Iraq pajamas	Loose lightweight trousers/a loose usually two-piece lightweight suit designed especially for sleeping or lounging, like those still worn in the hot tropical climates of India slippers	a light low-cut shoe, much like the moccasins used by Indians of the eastern United States and Canada the bathroom	a room containing a bathtub or shower and usually a sink and toilet, a more recent development from Europe soap	to use cleaning our hands or body, invented by the ancient Gauls of present-day France, lightly scented with perfume first used in the Near East the chair	a seat typically having four legs and a back for one person, the same type found in southern Europe clothes	an outer garment, much like those originally used by nomadic tribes of central Asia shoes	an outer covering for the human foot, made from skins tanned by a process invented in ancient Egypt cereal	made from grains first grown in the Middle East - oats, wheat, bran, or corn first domesticated by Indians of the southwest United States and Mexico milk	from cows first domesticated in the Middle East cap	a head covering, invented in central Asia papers	a similar sheet, containing a written or printed statement, first developed in ancient China

Our young American wakes up in the morning in a warm bed (built from a design going back to the ancient Middle East and modified in northern Europe before being exported to America).

He throws back the sheet (made of cotton, first grown and domesticated in India) and blanket (made of wool from sheep first tamed and herded in the Middle East, probably in what is now Iraq).

Wearing his favorite pajamas (like those still worn in the hot tropical climates of India), he puts on his slippers (much like the moccasins used by Indians of the eastern United States and Canada) and goes into the bathroom (a more recent development from Europe), where he washes with soap (invented by the ancient Gauls of present-day France, lightly scented with perfume first used in the Near East).

Returning to his bed room, he removes his clothing from the back of the chair (the same type found in southern Europe) and starts to dress for school. He puts on his clothes (much like those originally used by nomadic tribes of central Asia ) and shoes (made from skins tanned by a process invented in ancient Egypt).

At breakfast, he eats a bowl of cereal (made from grains first grown in the Middle East - oats, wheat, bran, or corn first domesticated by Indians of the southwest United States and Mexico) and drinks a glass of milk (from cows first domesticated in the Middle East). He runs upstairs again to brush his teeth.

Then he puts on his jacket (made of wool from the Middle East) and cap (invented in central Asia), picks his books and papers (first developed in ancient China), and heads out the door to the bus stop.
